

Natural.

Natural lighting is important to our well-being. It gives the effect of eagerness, innovation, better problem-solving and communication skills. Making use of big windows, glass walls or see through partitions and even full height mirrors are the tricks for this trend.

Bolder Better.

The old plain picture of office design is bidding goodbye as today's design trend have more color and personality. In the past, offices merely concentrated on functionality. But today's employees respond better to office design that surprises, boosts and makes coming to work more fun and interesting.

Foliage Is In.

Indoor foliage is so popular to office design today. Plants around the workplace is more than just a visual. They provide healthy air and create a more livelier vibe in a space. The plants' organic colors, textures and fabrics produce a relaxed environment, all of which work together to alleviate stress and increase concentration.

Monochrome.

A monochromatic color palette has only one color but uses the entire spectrum of shades, tones and hints of that single color. It is often used in design to express a pattern that is consistent but nevertheless distinctive and easy to recognize.

Alternative Space.

Alternative spaces are those areas that were unusual for employees to work from. Think of corridors, in between pillars, window ledges or even an open space under the stairs. This concept emphasizes how you can make best use of your space by giving each and every corner a function.

Back to Basics.

Often times we strive to design spaces that feel refined yet workable and relaxing. Using the basics –raw finishes, plain painted walls contrasting the texture of cement finish and creating balance and rhythm, sophistication can be achieved. Going back to the basics proves timeless and would appeal to almost any taste.
